I propose, sofar as God may help me. show you low we may bring our region into or linary life and practice it common hings yesterday, to-day, o-morrow.

And in the first place. I remark: We ight to bring religion into our orlinary conversation. A dam breaks and two or three villages are subperged, a South American carthquake swallows a city, and people begin to talk about the uncertainty of human fe, and in that conversation think ey are engaging in religious service, hen there may be no religion at all. have noticed that in proportion as hrist an experience is shallow, men alk about funerals and death-bods and carses and tombstones and epitaphs. f a man has the religion of the Gospel uits full power in his soul he will alk chiefly about this world and the eternal world, and very little comparatively about the insignificant pass between this and that. Yet how seldom is that the religion of Christ is a elcome theme? If a man full of the ospel of Christ goes Into a religious rele and begins to talk about sacred things all the conversation is hushed and things become exceedingly awkward. As on a summer day, the forests full of song and chirp and carpl, mighty chorus of bird harmonies, every branch an orchestra-if a hawk appears in the sky, all the voices are hushed, so I have sometimes seen a social circle that ol we will talk about it in an exiliarant mood. It is more refreshing sunshine, it gives a man joy here, and prepares him for everlasting happiness sefore the throne of God. And yet, if the theme of religion be istroduced into a circle, everything is silencedsilenced unless, perhaps, an aged Chrisfeeling that something ought to be

The trouble is that men professing the faith of the Gospel are often so inconsistent that they are afraid their conversation will not harmonize with their life. can not talk the Gospel unless we live the Gospel. You will often fad a man whose entire life is full of inconsistencies filling his conversation with such expressions as, "we are miserable sinners," "the Lord help us," "the Lord est, then we go to God for comfort; but bless you," interlarding their conversation with such phrases, which are mere out in the Vast Trackless Deserts of the An item in the press stating that the City of Peking in her recent trip sailed 1,840 miles without meeting a single sail, is cited as showing the loneliness of the Pacific ocean. In the summer of 1850 I left San Francisco, says a traveler, m a sail-vessel (formerly from Baltimire) for Panama, distance 4,000 miles, and on the entire route, which lasted forty-three days, we never saw a sail. Loneliness is no word for it, especially when we lay becalmed in the tropics with our vessel floating as helplessly about as a chip on a mill-pond, the ground swell keeping up the monotonous roll of the vessel from side to side all day and all night, and day after day each roll being accompanied by a flap of the sails and a creaking of the rigging that might have passed for the flap of the wings and the wall of lost spirits

When we read about Noah and his ark we are apt to think that he must have had a lonely time, but then he was out only forty days, and besides, with all the animals, etc., on board, he had plenty to occupy his time and attention, and if he wanted amusement to while away the time, he had only to start a sparring match between his monkeys and parrots. True, there is no report of any such proceeding on his part, but that is doubtless because there was no modern newspaper reporter on board. I tell you a man can not realize what loneliness or comfort s until he has made some such trip, and if he wants to complete his educa tion in that line he should preface it with a tramp of 2,000 miles over the nountains and across the deserts amid volves and wild Indians as thousands of '49-ers dld. -Washington Star-

Don't Blame the Cook

If a baking powder is not uniform in strength, so that the same quantity will always do the same work, no one can know how to use it, and uniformly good, light food cannot be produced with it.

All baking powders except Royal, because Improperly compounded and made from inferior materials, lose their strength quickly when the can is opened for use. At subsequent bakings there will be noticed a falling off in strength. The food is heavy, and the flour, eggs and butter wasted.

It is always the case that the consumer suffers in pocket, if not in health, by accepting any substitute for the Royal Baking Powder. The Royal is the embodiment of all the excellence that it is possible to attain in an absolutely pure powder. It is always strictly reliable. It is not only more economical because of its greater strength, but will retain its full leavening power, which no other powder will, until used, and make more wholesome food.
